Dwain traveled to Burundi, Africa to assess the needs of AIDS orphans there. Rev. Travis McManus, Rev. Rick Lee, and Pastor Darrel Blankenship accompanied Dwain on this trip. They witnessed hundreds of abandoned children scavenging the streets for food and shelter. After meeting with local officials and pastors, it was decided to start a feeding program for these desperate children under the name "African Children's Outreach." Rev. Travis McManus serves as the President of African Children's Outreach (ACO) and headquarters in Mississippi.
